

JAMES HARE

SINCE 1865

Welcome to James Hare, where five generations of British textile experience meets timeless design.

Since 1865, the Hare family has been at the heart of the British textile industry, designing, manufacturing and distributing elegant fabrics that elevate the everyday.

We pride ourselves on being custodians of silk and fine materials, with a duty to keep inspiring creativity and quality.

So, whether you are seeking subtle tones or a playful pop of colour, statement wallcoverings or intricate trims, you will find inspiration among our carefully curated collections.

We believe that beautiful design has the power to elevate the everyday.

Shaped by quality

Since the very beginning, excellent quality in both product and service has been at the heart of all we do. Whether you are looking for trims, fabrics or wallcoverings, you can be sure they will exceed expectations.

Family is at our heart

Founded in 1865 by our namesake, James Hare, the business has remained proudly family-owned and operated for over 160 years, guided by our simple principles: Family, Quality and Design.

The Carriage

In 1901, news spread that Queen Victoria was gravely ill. At a time when the entire nation dressed in black serge after the death of a monarch, James made a bold and risky decision: he invested every penny he had in the cloth.

When the Queen died, the company sold an astounding 250,000 metres of black serge in three months.

Almost overnight, the company transformed from a small business into a nationally recognised name. James treated himself to a beautifully crafted, state-of-the-art carriage - the pinnacle of luxury in its era - which has since become our logo.
